Former Owners of Two Illicit Massage Parlors Charged with COVID-Relief Fraud

Defendants applied for pandemic relief for businesses engaged in prostitution

BOSTON – Two former owners of massage parlors have been charged in connection with filing for and obtaining fraudulent pandemic-related loans under the Coronavirus Aid, Relief and Economic Security (CARES) Act for their respective illicit businesses where workers engaged in commercial sex acts with customers.

Chynna Savath, 56, of Woonsocket, R.I., was charged with two counts of wire fraud. Savath is the former owner of Thai Body Work, a massage parlor in Franklin.

According to the charging documents, in June 2020, Savath submitted fraudulent applications to the Small Business Administration (SBA) for COVID-19 relief through the Paycheck Protection Program (PPP) and Economic Injury Disaster Loans (EIDL) program under the CARES Act. In the applications, Savath falsely certified that the applicant was not engaged in any illegal activity, despite knowing that her employees at Thai Body Work engaged in prostitution with customers and collected a portion of fees paid by each customer. In total, Savath obtained $29,646 in fraudulent payments from the EIDL and PPP loan programs.

Aticha Jittaphol, 32, of Brighton, was charged separately with two counts of making false statements in federal loan applications. Jittaphol is the former owner of Mantra Dhevi Spa in Brighton.

However, her employees at Mantra Dhevi Spa engaged in prostitution from which she collected a portion of fees paid by each customer. Jittaphol also actively promoted the prostitution by recruiting employees and attracting new customers. In total, Jittaphol obtained $7,066 in fraudulent payments from the EIDL and PPP loan programs.
